

1891 Norway Census: Searching Indexes and Images

Liv H. Anderson, CGSM, AG[®]

AndersonLH@FamilySearch.org

This class is designed to teach family history researchers how to find a person in the Indexed and original images of the 1891 Census.

Objectives:

Patrons will be able to find family in the 1891:

- Indexed census
- Original images

Background:

The 1891 Census of Norway has been kept somewhat different from most of the other Norwegian censuses. Therefore, this class is intended to help family history researchers learn some simple steps that will make it easy to find a person in both the indexed and original images.

The indexing of this census was not performed by people in Norway, it was indexed by kind people here in the United States. Even though the indexers did a great job, there are cases where a mistake was made, and the original census must be consulted for accuracy. By following the information given in this class it should be fairly easy to find a person in the indexed version and then use information there to find the person in the original images.

Find a link to the 1891 Census for Norway by going to Digitalarkivet and then choose the county and parish of your choice.
